

TRAUMA LEADERSHIP WEBINAR

Pediatric Readiness:
Streamlined Implementation Strategies for
Trauma Center and Emergency Department Leaders

REGISTER NOW TO ATTEND MARCH 27

Pediatric Readiness: Streamlined Implementation Strategies for Trauma Center and Emergency Department Leaders

As you know, the Grey Book from the American College of Surgeons includes a brand-new requirement: All trauma centers must assess the pediatric readiness of their Emergency Department and develop a plan for addressing the gaps.

The requirement is straightforward, but the obstacles are many:

...hospital administrators who do not see the urgency of this new requirement.

...the common belief that improving pediatric readiness will be difficult and costly.

...the gap between an ED's self-assessed readiness score and its "real life" readiness to treat children.

If you are concerned about your own hospital's readiness to treat pediatric patients, I invite you to join us on March 27 for a new trauma leadership webinar:

[Pediatric Readiness: Streamlined Implementation Strategies
for Trauma Center and Emergency Department Leaders](#)

During this live event, emergency nursing expert Karen Webb will dispel the misconceptions surrounding pediatric readiness — and explain how trauma and ED leaders can leverage existing resources to ensure better care for sick and injured children.

Karen will...

...spotlight the small improvements that can add up to significant gains in pediatric readiness.

...explain how to secure pediatric equipment, supplies and medications without significant extra costs.

...share doable strategies for immediately improving pediatric readiness in team processes and staff education.

To learn more and reserve your seat, click here.

I hope you join us!

Bob

Robert Fojut

Editor

Trauma System News

P.S. Do you have colleagues in ED management, hospital leadership or pediatric care who would benefit from this webinar? Everyone who wants to make sure their hospital is ready to treat injured children is welcome to join us, so please feel free to forward this invitation.